West Virginia as a Wine Growing State.

The statistics of grape and wine production in the United States show that West Virginia has 400 acres in vineyards, and produces annually an average of 71,022 gallons of wine, which will sell in the markets, on the average, for 801,461 80. Of this amount Ohlo county produces 19,500 gallons, valued at $14,025. There are in this county 20 meres devoted to grapes, and the average yield per acre is 3,750 pounds of grapes. Of these, about one-half, only, are used for wine, the others being sold for table consumption. Three lundred; gallons of wine per acre is the average production, and it is quoted at seventy-live cents per gallon. Ohlo county ranks first in acreage and production, though much of the wine made elsewhere in the State is valued at a considerably higher figure. West Virginia ranks tenth among the States as a wine grower, and the independency is toward a higher position, the prospect being that in another decade the value of the wines produced will be no small item in the income of the people of West Virginia.

is looked upon with considerably more than usual interest, some description of the plot and play may not be inappropriate:

The comedy abounds in charming music, vocal and instrumental, solos, duets, &c. "Tina" is a young country lass, having been educated in the city and humored by her parents ("Mr. and Mrs. littled") in all the extravagant ideas of dress and city fashions. "Tony," a rollicking German lad, fresh from Fatherland, at work for "Tinas" father, devotes the most of his time to cultivating a natural talent for painting, singing, &c. A mutund affection springs up between "Tina" and "Tony," and the course of their true love runs smoothly until an adventuress and her brother come into their Eden. They, as summer boarders, are entertained by the "Hatzels, "Mrs. Fleeter," learning that, at the death of an uncle in Germany, Tony will inherit vast estates and a title, determines to win his hand. Tina at first doubts his sincerity, until Mrs. Fleeter comes upon the scene with a last hope of winning Tony. She receives chilling assurances that her presence is not required, and the happy union of Tina and Tony closes a pretty every day scene in life. The moral of the comedy is wholesome and it depicts scenes familiar to every audience.

The Educational Convention.

The prospects are that the Convention of County School Superintendents, to be held in this city the latter part of the present month, will be a great success. State Superintendent Butcher yesterlay obtained the consent of the proper authorities for the use of the House of Delegates for the sessions of the Convention, and a convenient hall is thus secured without expense.
